

A NOTE FOR GROWN-UPS

These postcards are for your child to write or draw a message to their pet.

They might want to share news, say something they miss, or simply say goodnight. There's no right or wrong thing to write. Some children will fill the whole card. Some will draw a picture. Some will write just one word.

Printing options

You can print these single-sided (just the front) for simpler use, or double-sided (front and back) if your child enjoys the idea of a "real" postcard. Either works perfectly.

About the stamp

You'll notice there's a special stamp already on the back. In the book, these letters don't need real stamps, real envelopes, or even real paper. But some children love the ritual of writing something down. This stamp means their postcard is ready to go, whenever they are.

Where does it go? Instead of an address, your child can simply write their pet's name. That's all it needs. It will reach them.

What happens next

Some children will want to keep their postcards somewhere safe. Some might "post" them. Some might tuck them under a pillow or let them go. There's no right way.

You can print as many copies as you like.
These thoughts don't ever have to run out.

Tip: For sturdier postcards, try printing on thicker paper or card.

THOUGHTS TO POST

Today I wanted to tell you...

I miss the way you...

Guess what?

I love you because...

My favourite memory of us is...

Thank you for...

POSTCARD BACKS

A light beige rectangular template for a postcard back. The left side is decorated with small starburst patterns. A vertical dashed line runs down the center. On the right side, there is a small square stamp placeholder with a heart inside. Below the stamp, the text "To:" is followed by four horizontal lines for an address.
